Submitted by Catherine Burkard

WORKSHOP SPONSORED BY SOUTHEAST CHAPTER

The Southeast Chapter is sponsoring a “Pre-Standards Workshop” for Guild members in Charleston, SC on Wednesday, September 14, with Cathleen Baker on Adhesives for Book and Paper Conservation.  It will be from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. in a location near the Seminar hotel.  Fee is $100 plus a supply fee. Attendees will focus on several water-based adhesives and investigate their properties and behaviors. Hands-on activities including preparing adhesives, making pre-coated papers for repairs and overall linings, treating cloth-lined varnished maps, removing old adhesives and guards, and surface cleaning. Cathy is recognized for her award-winning reference book on conservation and for her successful publishing business, The Legacy Press, at >www.thelegacypress.com<

Oak Knoll Press presents
Illustrated by Lynd Ward
by Robert Dance

Published to accompany the exhibition "Illustrated by Lynd Ward, From the Collection of Robert Dance," on view at the Grolier Club November 19 2015 - January 16 2016. From the preface:  "Considering the fame Lynd Ward achieved during the 1930s and his role as a book illustrator for five decades, it is surprising that a comprehensive study of his life and career has not appeared.  This book does not promise to be either.  Rather it is an introduction to his position as one of America’s foremost book illustrators and the first attempt to compile a checklist of his published work."

Aesthetic Tracts by Ellen Mazur Thomson

Reviewed by Barbara Adams Hebard

Many GBW members are familiar with book cover artist Sarah Wyman Whitman and will recognize that the title of this book, Aesthetic Tracts, was taken from a phrase used by her in a Boston lecture on book design in the 19th century. Although the author, Ellen Mazur Thomson, begins her volume with a discussion of that 1894 lecture and devotes a chapter to influences in Whitman’s work, the book is not narrowly focused on Whitman; rather it is an exploration of the wide span of artistic expression and production in book arts during the late 19th century. In so doing, Ms. Thomson’s resulting work looks at hand bookbinding, trade binding, printing, book illustration and materials while covering this time period, an ambitious undertaking in a mere 177 pages. She carries this off by alternating chapters covering a sweeping range of information involving specific aspects of book production in several countries with chapters that focus on discrete, small groups of artists, artisans, or publishers and, within both these chapter styles, brings in contemporary comments and complaints about the transformation of the book during the nineteenth century.

For example, the first chapter sets out to describe the realm of book design and production within the context of the increase of the material abundance of that century. Ms. Thomson describes the technologies and materials available and informs the reader of the differences in national (France, Britain, and the United States) approaches to book production. She is careful to note the influences of the various international expositions, in particular, those which arose in the second half of the 19th century.

Moving beyond production, in the second chapter, Ellen Mazur Thomson addresses the debate over design principles, at that time seen as a choice between ornament and symbol. She uses quotes from hand binders, such as T.J. Cobden-Sanderson, as well as artists involved with commercial book production, such as Whitman, to reveal the intense opinions voiced on the topic. Whether they embraced ornament or symbol as their chosen design principle, Ms. Thomson researched enough of the artists and provided ample quotes to reveal that they, and other book artists, saw themselves as forward thinking, creating books reflective of their own time.

The above noted chapter focused on Sarah Wyman Whitman follows. A biography of Mrs. Whitman is included in this chapter and it was a surprise to me that her membership in the Boston Athenaeum, an institution strongly supportive of women artists, providing study and exhibition opportunities, is not even mentioned. Ms. Thomson, although clearly an admirer of Whitman’s work; does not let that admiration stand in the way of thoroughly assessing Whitman’s words about her artistic expression, pointing out contradictory statements she made with regard to Japanese influence on her work. Ms. Thomson’s study of Whitman’s techniques, especially in expanding on her approach to dealing with the limitations of designing covers for trade publishers, really makes it clear to the reader what an important figure Whitman was in the book production of her day.

Aesthetic Tracts is not limited to the study of the books’ exteriors, but also looks into the 19th century technology that impacted the text and illustration as well. Ms. Thomson uses the 1883 work, Histoire des quatre fils Aymon, as an example of a book in which “inventive color images and ornaments filled every page.” She shows how the publisher H. Launette, working with a collaborative team of Charles Gillot, Charles Marcilly, and Eugene Grasset, produced a book using the most advanced printing technology of the day. From that chapter, with in-depth focus on one book, the author moves on to discuss the widespread use of illustrations in 19th century literature, and the subsequent changes in status of the book and the illustrator. She reports the angry response of contemporaries who believed in the “supremacy of the written word.”

The subsequent chapters continue the pattern, Chapter six exploring the ways James McNeill Whistler, Stephane Mallarme, and Oscar Wilde promote their aesthetics in material forms, with Chapter seven focusing on text by three publisher-printers. Chapter eight goes into exhibitions beyond the afore-mentioned international exhibitions and the author notes changes in how the book had come to be seen as an object and the evolution of book design because of this newly formed attention.

Throughout all the chapters in Aesthetic Tracts, whether focusing on particular book artists, or specific parts of book production, Ellen Mazur Thomson manages to pack in a lot of information about the book world in general during the nineteenth century. Overall, this volume could be regarded as an entry point for learning more about book production of the period and could encourage readers to look into those aspects of which they may previously have been unaware.

Barbara Adams Hebard, Conservator of the John J. Burns Library at Boston College, is a graduate of the North Bennet Street School bookbinding program. Ms. Hebard enjoys writing reviews and articles on book related topics.

When I expanded my studio nearly two years ago, I needed large work tables that didn’t cost a fortune. I had previously purchased a 5’ x 8’ steel table with a formica top, but over the years it has shifted too much and the top has begun to warp, plus it was really costly and a pain to carry up flights of stairs and put together. I was also looking for a design that could hold a lot of weight but be moved around easily, and needed a top surface that would be solvent resistant and never warp after years of moisture exposure. After some discussion, we decided to build the tables ourselves to the size of a full sheet of plywood, 4’ x 8’ for ease of construction.

Six 4” x 4” posts of kiln dried Douglas Fir ensured more strength and structure than only 4 posts, and also won’t twist or warp. The rest of the framework was built with 2” x 4” pine, and the second level shelf was made with 1” x 8”s. Good strong screws were used throughout, not nails, so that we can take these apart in the future, and also for tighter construction.

The top is a full sheet of ¾” plywood covered with a ½” full sheet of PVC, which was purchased from our local plastics supplier. After building the framework around the legs, the plywood top was screwed into the posts, and the PVC top was screwed into the plywood using larger chrome plated screws, countersunk into the PVC. The top is a bit soft so we have to be careful with tools, but it’s solvent resistant and waterproof, making it perfect for paper treatments.

Large felt pads were attached to the bottom of all legs, so the tables can be slid across the floor easily. Making two tables exactly the same size also meant we can push them together to deal with really oversized pieces. Two views of the plans are pictured here - forgive any flaws, I’m not a carpenter. In Memoriam: Lisa von Clemm

Here at the North Bennet Street School bookbinding department we mourn the loss of our great friend, Lisa von Clemm. We also wish to honor her friendship and patronage.

Lisa was a long time NBSS board member—joining in 1989 and serving continuously until 2014. We are fortunate to have Lisa’s daughter, Stefanie von Clemm carry on the family tradition on our board of directors. During her tenure Lisa initiated the Annual Evening of Craft, hosting the first event in 2000, and the tenth anniversary event in 2009, at Hillhurst, her home in Wellesley. She was a fierce advocate for the bookbinding program in particular. I personally met Lisa when I was a student in the late 1990’s and clearly recall her interest in our work and our working conditions. The bookbinders at NBSS enjoyed her steady support as it moved up in the world (from the basement at 39 North Bennet Street, to the second floor of that building and to our present home in a light filled bindery at 150 North Street.

Particularly since I began teaching in the program myself in 2007 I’ve benefited from Lisa’s constant encouragement to make the program the best it could be, as she pushed us all here at the school to make improvements every time she visited. Lisa had strong opinions and high standards—and I like to think she was proud of her involvement and support.

Lisa combined her interests in NBSS and the Boston Athenaeum by funding, through the Michael and Lisa von Clemm Foundation, a regular fellowship in bookbinding conservation for a bookbinding graduate. This fellowship at the Athenaeum offers something of a “third year” for NBSS students to delve more deeply into conservation and it has given many a significant bump in their pursuit of a book conservation career.

Lisa helped us organize our biennial “field trips” to England where students had the opportunity to see some of our suppliers, meet colleagues in Designer Bookbinders, and visit some amazing collections such as that of the Wormsley Library… and of course Lisa’s own special collection of fine bindings. Even this past spring, while ill, Lisa and her daughter Stefanie graciously hosted us at her home in London to celebrate our visit, talk about bookbinding, and look at a few of her favorite bindings collected over her years of work with the Designer Bookbinder’s annual competition. We even enjoyed seeing a bit of Lisa’s own work in spite of her humility.

Lisa von Clemm was a devoted supporter, advocate, patron, colleague and friend to all of us at North Bennet Street School. She will be missed.

With Sadness,

The Marbling Tray

The Passing of Norma B. Rubovits
by Bill Drendel

The book arts community lost a good friend this week Wednesday, when Norma B. Rubovits died at the age of 97. She was a pioneering paper marbler, imaginative bookbinder, major collector and donor. For decades from the 1960s well into the current century, she had a role to play in Chicago book arts and at the Newberry Library. The Newberry hosted a retrospective exhibition of her work in 2010 that celebrated her international renown.

Norma’s story is one of determined craft, original thinking, and careful collecting, but it started almost by chance. One day in 1964, Norma’s husband Frank asked her if she wanted to take a binding class with him. He had inherited a collection of deteriorating books from his grandfather’s library. Norma said “Why not?” and off they went - to study with Elizabeth Kner, a well- known Hungarian émigré binder with a studio in the Printer’s Row area of Chicago. Although Norma became an accomplished binder, her attention soon turned to marbled papers. She taught herself to make marbled paper, by referring to old manuals and sample books at the Newberry, and also by seeking out and getting to know others interested in the art. Her papers were accomplished enough that Jim Wells bought some for use in the Newberry Library bindery, and other customers lined up too. But Norma was not content to produce sheet after sheet of beautiful but predictable papers. She started experimenting with smaller marbles that took up only part of a sheet and eventually came to place these compositions toward the center, using the sheet as a sort of frame. She first referred to these asmarbled “doodles” and later “mono-prints,” but finally settled on “vignettes.” The marbling world had never seen anything like them, and they caused a stir. The Chicago Public Library included her prominently in an exhibit in 1969. She got invitations to exhibit her papers and bindings in group shows locally, nationally, and internationally. She visited Turkey, then as now a center of the marbling world, and corresponded with marblers everywhere. Her international reputation was further solidified in 1992 when Dawson’s Bookshop in Los Angeles issued Marbled Vignettes, a limited edition of original miniature marbles along with an accompanying interview in which Norma described her methods and aesthetic.

From the start, Norma Rubovits collected everything she could find on the art of marbling, including copies of the rare manuals she had seen at the Newberry and hundreds of other works about paper, binding, and related book arts. She built a huge collection of papers made by others, largely by purchasing or trading some of her sheets for some of theirs. She often told the story of how shocked and pleased she was when Newberry’s curator, James Wells expressed interest in keeping her papers as part of the John. M. Wing Foundation. But Wells retired soon after and he referred her to “the new guy,” Paul Gehl. Norma’s major gifts to the Newberry began in 1991 and continued for over a decade. As recently as last year she was adding individual papers and books. The collection is always growing in other ways too. Marblers and authors on paper continue to send their work to the Newberry in Norma’s honor. Norma also endowed a book fund at the Newberry for the purchase of books on binding and decorated papers. The collection now numbers more than 4000 marbled pieces and more than 170 books, including many of Norma’s own bindings.

Many will mourn Norma as artist and friend. Born Norma Bloch on August 26, 1918 in Tulsa, Oklahoma, she graduated from the University of Oklahoma and came to Chicago to work at the University of Chicago hospitals as a dietitian. It was during this time she met Dr. Frank E. Rubovits, an obstetrician-gynecologist from an established Chicago family. They raised two daughters: Paula, an artist and model, and Randi, a psychiatrist. Frank died in 1987, Paula in 1988. Norma died March 16, 2016. Randi Rubovits-Seitz is the sole immediate survivor. A memorial is being planned.

Dear Guild of Book Workers members,

I hope everyone is having a great spring! I have listed our new Guild members added between 2/24/2016 and 4/20/2016 (thanks for joining!) as well as those members who have added chapters to their membership. Please let me know if there are any errors or problems with your listing. All members can update their addresses and specialties online by logging into their accounts, but if you would like help with updating your member information, please let me know! I am also happy to share member news in the newsletter as well – just send an email to membership@guildofbookworkers.org. Cheers! Jennifer.

Call for Papers

The Guild of Book Workers Journal welcomes submissions of papers, articles, essays and proposals for photo galleries for our forthcoming issues. Both members and nonmembers are welcome to submit. We will consider submissions addressing any of the fields represented by the Guild’s membership, including but not limited to:

- Bookbinding (Descriptions of techniques and how-to articles; discussions of particular structures, both old and new)
- Conservation (treatment techniques, what does or does not work, noteworthy programs, history)
- Artists’ Books (innovative structures, examinations of an artist’s body of work)
- Book art techniques (calligraphy, marbling, paper-making, printing)
- History (little-known events, figures, or movements; new findings about a period or particular development in the history of the book and book arts)

All submissions to the Journal will be peer-reviewed. Authors of accepted pieces will be expected to format their manuscript and image files according to our style guidelines, available upon request or online at http://www.guildofbookworkers.org/resources/journal/journal.php. Send queries and electronic submissions (.rtf, .doc or .pdf formats with low-resolution placeholder image files) to journal@guildofbookworkers.org

Submissions are accepted on an ongoing basis and considered for publication in the next forthcoming issue with space available.
